New Literacy Volunteers Trained

NEW MILFORD — Literacy Volunteers on the Green recently trained several new tutors during its March training session, which was funded by the Ellen Knowles Harcourt Foundation.

These tutors are Ann Clifford, Jacqueline Farrell, Cindy Gugg, Barbara Leahey and Edna Roman of New Milford; David Bain, Janet Meth, Roz Molho and Maura LaRocca of Kent; Karen Kopta, Lorraine Tvrdik and Constance Cheever of Roxbury; Deborah Rathbun of Sharon; Karen Kenagy of Litchfield; and Greg Horan of New Fairfield.

Taught by long-time ESL teacher Arley Gray, the tutor training consists of nine hours of instruction, observation of current classes and twice yearly follow-up sessions.

Following the training, LVG tutors conduct weekly classes in a variety of locations. However, even with the additional tutors, there is still a waiting list of students who want to learn how to speak, read and write in English.

Since its inception in 2005, the non-profit organization has trained more than 140 tutors and has served more than 400 students, including 10 who have gone on to become U.S. citizens.

Today, the organization conducts 60 classes a week in the northwest corner, giving language instruction to prospective citizens, those wishing to improve employment prospects and those who want to more fully integrate into the community.

LVG conducts tutor training twice a year to meet the continuing demand for ESL classes.

Located at 7 Whittlesey Ave. in New Milford, Literacy Volunteers on the Green is a program of the United Way of Western Connecticut and a ProLiteracy America Volunteer Program Affiliate.

Those seeking additional information about the program, or wishing to recommend a student in need, may call 860-355-0830, e-mail info@lvg-ct.org or visit www.lvg-ct.org.
